

Dominic Bramley

Chair of Humanities

I want to stand for the Chair of Humanities for a multiplex of reasons. After being at York St John University for what is nearing on two academics years. I have received an abundance of support from the University and academic representatives, I consider it a fitting time to give back my support. I aim to do this through my passion for Humanities as a whole. I aim to assist the department by acting as a champion to academics acting as a reliable representative. Furthermore, timetabling is an issue which I aim to address, ensuring that it can work efficiently for all. The opportunity will be provided for Humanities students to ask questions and also give advice and support. This will be pivotal to ensure everybody throughout Humanities is represented and is provided with the chance to have their input heard and reflected. Therefore, communication will be highly significant. This includes my own communication to report on the impact of my role throughout the academic year. This will be crucial in the passing of particular polices regarding humanities, as it will allow me to be in an informed situation to represent everybody. Ultimately, I want to ensure all Humanities students feel that their studies are progressive by providing necessary support and removing any barriers to individual's educational developments. The experience of studying Humanities as a student at York St University is a truly amazing opportunity. I aim to ensure that this is maintained for everybody.